Preface

1. History

The British Organ Archive (formerly English Organ Archive) was established at the Library of the University of Keele in 1974, through the good offices of Mr Stanley Stewart, (then University Librarian), and Dr Michael Sayer, (the first Hon. Archivist). It was removed to Birmingham Public Libraries, Music Department, Central Library in 1986. It was placed under the protection of the Music Department, the head of which, Malcolm Jones, became Archivist. In 1996 the BOA was transferred to the Birmingham Libraries Archives Department where it now resides. The material is the property of the British Institute of Organ Studies (except for a few records that remain the property of the businesses themselves) and is held on deposit at the Library.

2. The work of the Archive

The work of the BOA may be considered under four headings:

i Preservation. The primary material (original ledgers, order books, drawings, etc) is stored in a controlled environment. The information is copied onto microfilm or microfiches so that the originals, often fragile, are not handled. Extra copies of the microfilms and microfiches are held off-site as a insurance against disaster.

ii Sorting and Indexing. The material is sorted into logical batches and the information is indexed to make it readily accessible for research. Organs are listed in the Main Index; organ builders are listed in the Freeman-Edmonds Directory of British Organ Builders (DBOB).

iii Research Facilities. Enquiries about organs and organ builders are received from academic, private and trade researchers. Straightforward queries by post, telephone or fax are dealt with by the Birmingham Archives staff. In line with general practice, they can devote up to half an hour on a query. More extended queries usually require the researcher to make a personal visit; if this arranged by appointment the relevant material can be prepared in advance.

iv Publications. The first edition of the DBOB has been published. It is available on Internet via the National Pipe Organ Register (NPOR). Its aim is to provide basic information about every organ builder who ever worked in Britain from c.950 to 1950. It presently contains upwards of 5400 names. The BOA Main Index is also available on Internet through the NPOR. It contains, at present, about 27000 locations mentioned in the BOA material, and is constantly being added to.

3. Material

Original manuscript and typescript documents from organ builders are referred to as 'Primary Sources'. These include Estimate Books, Order Books, Account Books, Ledgers, Shop Books, and Drawings. Photocopies and microfilmed copies are also included, as being facsimiles.

Information about organs from observers - researchers, collectors, etc - and from published documents is referred to as 'Secondary Sources'. These include manuscript notebooks by scholars and antiquaries, journals (and cuttings therefrom), reports by official bodies, etc.; books and periodicals; theses and dissertations.

Photographic records are referred to as 'Illustrations'. These include glass plate and acetate negatives (and prints therefrom).

4. BOA – How it can be used

The unique primary material is an invaluable source of information for the organ builder who is commissioned to work on an instrument, or the author who is preparing a book, booklet or article on the history of a particular organ, or for the private researcher or enthusiast. The primary material may be classified in four types: Estimates, Orders, Technical and Maintenance.

Estimates are found primarily in Estimate Books; these may show several different stages in the evolution of a scheme. They also include, of course, organs that were not actually built; but this is not entirely useless information: the existence of an estimate may point to the date, otherwise unknown, of an organ built by someone else! Letter Books amplify the sort of information contained in Estimate Books and frequently shed light on details. Orders contained in Order Books give information about organs actually built, with dates, costs, specifications, etc. Technical material includes Shop Books (instructions to the shop workforce) and Drawings. Drawings exist for A.E.Davies Ltd., Grant, Degens & Bradbeer, Gray & Davison, Kirtland & Jardine, Jardine, Hill, HNB, and Norman & Beard. References to on-going maintenance may be found in Ledgers, Tuning Registers, 'small orders' in Order books, etc., giving a continuous history of an organ (but rarely any detail). Not all types of material are available for every organ builder represented in the BOA – e.g. there are no Wadsworth drawings; there are no Hill ledgers.

As an example of the information that can be derived from primary technical material, there is the 3-manual organ that Hill provided for St. John, Darlinghurst, New South Wales, in 1885. The Shop Book Entry (Hill Shop Book 3, p.40) gives a shorthand stoplist to which are added scaling numbers, windchest rod lengths, bellows dimensions, casework material and treatment, type of metal for pipes above 4-foot and the names of the chief craftsmen entrusted with the workshop tasks. The Drawing gives plan, elevation and section, with basic outline of frame, reservoirs, windchests, swell box and actions runs – but no detail.

5. The BOA Main Index

The Index lists the locations of organs mentioned in the Archive; most of the Primary material and some of the Secondary material has been indexed. The task of indexing was begun by Dr. Michael Sayer soon after the Archive was established and has continued until the present time; there is still a large amount of material yet to be indexed, and this will take many years to complete, not to mention the influx of newly acquired material. The Handlist shows which items are included in the Index.

The initial stage of transferring the card index onto a database was completed in August 1998, and this date is given as the Revision Date. Subsequent revisions and additions carry the date on which they were made.

It is important to understand that the Index is not an academic authority in its own right; it is simply a research tool. The source to which the Index refers should be quoted as an authority, not the Index itself. It should also be borne in mind that the Index reports information as it is given in the Archive regardless of whether it is right or wrong.

Conventions in the BOA Index

Place names and counties

Locations conform to the usage found in Crockford's Shorter Directory, 1953-54. Common differences from other usages are covered by cross-references. Because the material indexed is largely pre 1950, the old county designations apply.

London

Practically all locations situated within the Greater London area are listed under the title 'LONDON'. Here they are given cross-references to the particular areas in which the information is placed. The areas are broadly those defined in Crockford's - such as Westminster, St. Marylebone, St. Pancras, Southwark, Hampstead, Lewisham, etc. Smaller areas within these categories are cross-referenced: Soho, for example, is cross-referenced to Westminster. The City of London is labelled 'LONDON, CITY'. To find the 'Royal Festival Hall', for example, look at 'LONDON, Royal Festival Hall'; this entry then directs you to 'LAMBETH, Royal Festival Hall'; for 'Moorfields Roman Catholic Church' the LONDON entry directs you to 'LONDON, CITY, St. Mary Moorfield'; etc.

Exports

Exported organs are indexed by location, country and continent. Many of the countries no longer exist or else have been renamed. The original names, as given in the indexed sources, are used, with modern names cross-referenced where necessary.

Parish Church

Where the designation 'Parish Church' is given in the Remarks field it indicates that the location in question is referred in at least one source by that title rather than by the dedication. For example, St. James the Great, Haslingden, is often referred to as Haslingden Parish Church.

Organ Builders

A system of simplified names is used, together with a few abbreviations; 'Wm.Hill & Son and Norman & Beard Ltd.', for instance, is given as 'HNB'. Some of the information in the secondary sources is imprecise: 'J.W.Walker & Sons', for example, may be given as 'J.Walker', 'J.W.Walker' or simply 'Walker'; the last designation may, of course, refer to the firm of 'C.H.Walker'. No attempt is made to edit such entries, except in the case of elementary spelling mistakes, and the occasional filling out of plain abbreviations. The firm 'Jardine' in the primary sources index refers to surviving material from all phases of the firms existence: Kirtland & Jardine, Jardine & Co., Thorold & Smith. A note in the Remarks field makes it clear when the work described was under a title other than Jardine.

Job Numbers

The job numbers are those given in the documents. There are different series of numbers in, for example, the Hill, Norman & Beard records: main orders are separate from small orders. To avoid confusion in the index small order numbers are prefixed with an asterisk and followed by the term 'small'.

Prices

The figures given for the costing of jobs are nominal and often only approximate. They are mentioned in order to give some indication of the magnitude of work involved. Prices are often multiple, with optional extras, and, in estimates and orders, are frequently different from the actual amounts actually paid. They do not, for example, take into account allowances made for old organs being taken in exchange. They should not be quoted as hard facts.

Tuning

Tuning often includes simple maintenance and small repairs

Staff

The British Organ Archive is administered by the Council of the British Institute of Organ Studies to whom all correspondence, other than requests for information, should be addressed.

Enquiries should be sent to Chris Kearn, 23 Millbrook Road, Kings Heath, Birmingham, B14 6SE
telephone 0121 603 1872 e-mail c.kearn@blueyonder.co.uk

Queries can be dealt with by the Birmingham Archives staff. There are five members of staff actively engaged in this work - though only one is on duty at any given time. They most easily identify items by their Library Catalogue number (e.g. MS1974) rather than BOA accession number, together with a description as given in the handlist. The location code (e.g. X83 B4) will also help them to readily identify the item that is requested amongst the vast holdings in the secure Book Room.

Queries should be addressed to

The British Organ Archive, Archives Department, Central Library, Birmingham B3 3HQ
telephone 0121 303 4217

Opening times

The British Organ Archive is situated in the Archives Department of the Birmingham Public Libraries. The Archives Department is located on floor 7, and is open every day except Monday and Sunday, between 9am and 5pm; on Thursday it remains open until 8pm. The search room is open to all members of the public, free of charge. An appointment is not necessary. Please sign the visitors' book on arrival. The department operates the ticket system administered by the County Archive Research Network. If you do not already possess a Network ticket you will need to complete a registration form on your first visit and to produce some official proof of identification which includes your address. You must bring your ticket with you on each visit. You will be asked to deposit your coat and bag in a key-operated locker. Copying facilities are available at the usual prices. Photocopies up to A3 size can be supplied. The drawings are not usually available for photocopying: the process damages the colouring that is such a delight in the drawings from the constituent firms of Hill, Norman & Beard. Photographs or Scans of Drawings may be ordered - though these are rather more expensive than photocopying.

Qualitative assessment of secondary sources so far indexed

Notebooks

1. The Sperling notebooks, formerly in the Royal College of Organists and now in the British Library, consists of MS stop-lists (and a few drawings) compiled by J.H. Sperling, dating from the early to mid 19th century. (See BIOSJI, 88-92, N.J.Thistelthwaite, 'Source Materials from the early 19th century'). They are available in the BOA on microfilm (and microfiche). This invaluable source of information has to be viewed with caution with regard to dates (and, sometimes, builders), and is best used in conjunction with other sources.

2. The Harvey notebooks, compiled by Sidney Harvey, consist of 41 volumes containing 3715 notes relating to over 5000 locations. They include cuttings from, for example, Musical Opinion between 1879-1920. This constitutes a comprehensive index of organ references in that journal. There are cuttings also from Musical Standard between 1862 and 1890, and some from Musical Times as early as 1879. The work of producing a useable index of these notebooks was undertaken by the late Richard Howell.

3. The Haycraft notebook is a MS listing of organs visited by Frank Haycraft in the first three decades of the 20th century. It gives summaries only - location, builder, size, etc - but no stop-lists. Its usefulness is, therefore, limited to giving basic information on organs not mentioned elsewhere.

Pamphlets

In the index, the term 'pamphlet' covers a variety of papers relating to organs in one particular location (often covering the work of several different organ builders over a period of time). These may be leaflets, local organ histories, local church histories, correspondence, estimates, technical notes, opening recital programmes, photographs, etc. The quality of the material varies enormously. These are placed in 'organ files' (often accumulated within a larger county file).

Dictionary of Organs and Organists

The 1st edition, dating from 1912, contains about 1300 locations. The information is a summary only, giving dates, builders, size of instrument, type of action, etc., and also the name of the current organist. The information is patchy and sometimes wrong, but many organs not otherwise recorded are included. The 2nd edition, is a revision of the 1st dating from 1921 (currently being added to the BOA Main Index).

The Organ

The main items in issue numbers 1 to 286 of this quarterly periodical are included in the BOA Main Index. This covers the period 1921 to 1993, (containing about 2300 organ locations). Richard Howell completed the draft of a comprehensive index (containing over 10,000 organ locations) which, when edited, will be added to the Main Index, replacing the present partial index.

Rotunda

This house journal of the firm of Henry Willis and Sons was published between 1925 and 1934, arranged in 5 volumes of 4 issues each.

Theses

1. James Berrow's doctoral thesis contains a useful and comprehensive gazetteer of organs built by Richard Nicholson (of Rochdale) and his son, John Nicholson (of Worcester), between 1820 and 1886. This has been added to the BOA Main Index and comprises over 400 organ locations.
2. Joseph McKee's doctoral thesis is a comprehensive survey of organs in Ulster. Although this has not yet been added to the BOA Main Index it is included in NPOR references.

Illustrations

The Andrew Freeman photographic plates cover the years 1895 to 1945. Freeman made prints of many of the plates, gave them reference numbers, and mounted them in 9 albums. These albums act as a visual index, and provide a means of copying the photographs without disturbing the fragile glass plate negatives. There are over 700 of these illustrations, many of them familiar to readers of The Organ, and other published work.

The Gilbert Benham and Sidney Harvey plates do not have a comparable system of referencing and are not, therefore, easy to access. This will be remedied in time.

Books

The library is an accumulation of books donated by members or included in bequests. It contains some rare titles, but it also omits some standard works. A number of popular titles have several copies. The books are for reference only.
